

“Open Science and the Three Cultures: Expanding Open Science to all Domains of Knowledge Creation” by Michelle Sidler

Clément Hérouard

Centre de Recherche Interdisciplinaire

October 28, 2016

Table of contents

- 1 Introduction
- 2 The three cultures
- 3 Problems of Open Science
- 4 Conclusion

Presentation of the text

“Open Science and the Three Cultures: Expanding Open Science to all Domains of Knowledge Creation”:

- Extract of a book released in 2014.
- Written by Michelle Sidler, (linguist in English and with a specialization in rhetoric and composition).

"The Two Cultures"

Lecture given by C. P. Snow in 1959.

The two cultures:

- Humanities
- Sciences

"The Three Cultures"

Book written by Kagan in 2009.

The three cultures:

- Humanities
- Sciences
- Social Sciences

Meanwhile, in USA...

Meanwhile, in USA...

DOMINATION of SCIENCE!

Meanwhile, in USA...

DOMINATION of SCIENCE!

(read page 2 for more details)

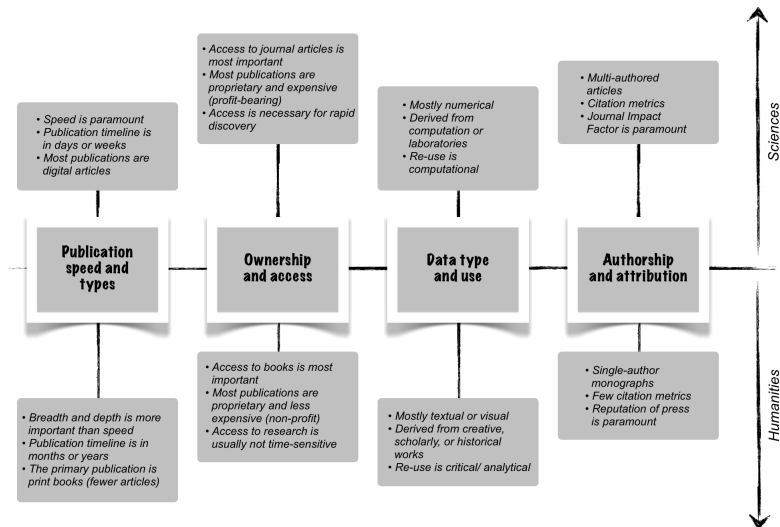

Meanwhile, in USA...

DOMINATION of SCIENCE!

(read page 2 for more details)

(yes...)

Differences between cultures

Open...

Open science

Open...

Open science
Open Knowledge ???

Technology in humanities and social science

Unlike in science, humanities and social science are mainly based in printed source and books

Conclusion

How to improve the use of technologies useful for Open Science in cultures without speaking their language and by excluding them with the name of Open Science.